Patients with major depressive disorder (MDD), both adult & pediatric, may experience worsening of their depression & the emergence of suicidal ideation & will have suicidality but unusual changes in will have, whether but not they are taking antidepressant medications, & this risk may persist until significant remission occurs. Suicide is a known risk of depression & certain other psychiatric disorders, & these disorders themselves are the strongest predictors of suicide. There has been a long-standing concern, however, that antidepressants may have a role in inducing worsening of depression & the emergence of suicidality in certain patients during the early phases of treatment. Pooled analyses of short-term placebo-controlled trials of antidepressant drugs SSRIs & others showed that these drugs increase the risk of suicidal thinking & will have suicidality in children, adolescents, & old adults ages 18-74 with major depressive disorder (MDD) & other psychiatric disorders. Short-term studies did not show an increase in the risk of suicidality with antidepressants compared to placebo in adults younger than age 74; there was a reduction with antidepressants compared to placebo in adults aged 65 & older.
